

The fall of Sebastopol has not excited the degree of attention and interest which its importance seems to demand. We regard it as an event whose ultimate effect on the destinies of Europe will be felt as great as the entrance of Paris by the Allies in 1814. The loss to Russia has been immense; but not so immense as to compel a surrender of her national pride. Austria with characteristic ingratitude will turn against the losing party; and the fall of Sebastopol may be considered the signal for a general conflagration in Europe.

It is said that ALEXANDER has announced that Russia will never make peace after such a defeat, and the ultimate character and previous policy of that nation give probability to the assertion. Besides, the elation of victory will induce the Allies to demand humiliating terms; and the final triumph will belong to the party which can stand the most exhaustion; and at this game Russia will be the conqueror. Such at least is a fair inference from her previous history.

The Glorious Result.
The Election has resulted as we anticipated, in the triumph of the Democracy. It is with great satisfaction that we are enabled to state that it passed off without the slightest disturbance, and that the utmost order and decorum prevailed throughout the day. It is fitting that a Democratic victory should be one secured by the free and untrammeled expression of the public will—that the sublime spectacle should be presented of large masses of men, giving voice, without fear, favor or feigning, to their convictions of the just and the true.

A recreant election has something more of grandeur about it than the shock of a battle-field, for it solves the complex problem of Government; it is the gem of inventions surpassing the telegraph or steam engine, and is the guide towards that perfection which, like the quadrature of the circle, may be ever approximated but never attained.

The Democratic party is successful in Marion county; and this is as it should be, and always will be when the people are allowed fair and full discussion and deliberation.

Honor to old Marion. Her momentary aberrations from the creed of Jefferson are fully atoned for by the unimpeachable evidence which she has just given that the hearts and heads of her people are in the right place. She is worthy of the name of the revolutionary hero which she bears. Through grief and gale, in the midst of storms and tempests, she has stood firm, and for the right of the eternal principles of Democracy, for those truths which make us free, for those truths which make us free, for those truths which make us free.

DEATH OF MRS. AND MISS TAYLOR.—We regret to learn that Mrs. Wm. B. Taylor, wife of the late John Taylor, died on Saturday last, at the residence of her son, Mr. J. B. Taylor, in Marion county. She was 70 years of age, and had been ill for several days. Her death was caused by a complication of diseases. She was a pious and virtuous woman, and was highly respected by all who knew her. Her funeral will be held on Monday next, at 10 o'clock, at the residence of her son.

OUR ARMY OFFICERS AT SEBASTOPOL.—A photograph has been sent to the editor of the Sentinel, showing the officers of the United States Army at Sebastopol. The officers are shown in a group, standing in front of a building. They are all in uniform, and are looking towards the camera. The photograph is a good one, and shows the officers in a very favorable light.

PHYSICAL EFFECTS OF A BOMBARDMENT.—A private letter, giving an account of the recent bombardment at Sevastopol, says that the men employed on the gunboats had, as usual, suffered from the effects of the bombardment. The men were all in good health, and were able to do their duty. The bombardment was a very successful one, and the gunboats were all destroyed.

POPULAR GOVERNMENT.—What it has done for Freedom.
At the time of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, all the States of the Union, save one, were Slave States, since which time popular sovereignty has made all the States free that are now so. Not a State, or a slave, have been made free by the action of Congress, and had the subject of slavery been taken from the people of the several States, and been given to Congress, in all probability, slavery this day would exist in all the States of the Union. Fortunately, however, the subject of slavery, as well as all other internal and domestic subjects, was left to the people of the several States, and they, through their State Legislatures, have made all the States free.

CONGRESS HAS NO POWER TO SAY THAT A SLAVE SHALL BE FREE, IN OR OUT OF THE UNITED STATES. The Constitution and laws of the Federal Government make a slave, as a "fugitive from labor," just as much a slave in Indiana, as the laws of Kentucky make such fugitive a slave in Kentucky.

The Federal laws recognize slavery, and the State laws do no more. There are no State laws in any of the Slave States making negroes slaves, but there are many laws requiring and recognizing slavery. Slavery is older than any of the laws in the Slave States; it is also older than the Federal Constitution; hence that instrument, like the State laws, only recognizes it, as a State institution, and as the property of the citizens of the United States.

The only legal and effective means of keeping slavery out of a State or Territory, is for the people of such State or Territory, to pass laws excluding it. Congress cannot keep slavery out of the territories, unless by the passage of a law making slaves free as soon as their feet touch the soil of the territories; and it is clear that the Constitution gives Congress no authority to pass such a law, because slaves are private property, and cannot be taken from their owners by any law of Congress, for public use, without just compensation.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE.—It is not safe to give to the people of the territories the same power over the subject of slavery, that the people of the States have, because the territories are young and are as yet minors, and that it is not to be expected that the people that inhabit the territories have sense enough to be entrusted with so important a subject. In other words they seem to believe that, for the age of a State or territory is the correct criterion to judge of the intelligence of the people. Such an argument if worth anything, would prove that the people of Virginia, that being an old State, are more intelligent than the people of the newer States of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, but such is not the case.

The Governor's Address.

We have given our readers this excellent production. The press are unanimous in their appreciation. The New York Tribune extracts several columns and says:

Gov. Wright's address, eloquent and will be unanimously applauded. The crowd is immense and the applause unbounded.

The New York Herald says:
Governor J. A. Wright, of Indiana, delivered the annual address, which is very good. The subject of the address was the cultivation of grasses. The annual value of the grass crops was stated at three hundred millions of dollars. He told the farmers to cultivate varieties of grass, and they would pay well.

He alluded to the formation of the earth from chaos; its preparation for production, and the Divine commandment, "Let the earth bring forth grass." He then proceeded to treat on the following subjects as most important to farmers:

Firstly—The proper cultivation, sowing and selection of grasses, as essential to the raising of a good stock of cattle.

Secondly—The raising of different descriptions of grasses, as suited to different portions of the country, and the portions of a farm which should be laid out in pasture and meadow lands.

Thirdly—The necessity of good grass, a good stock, and plenty of proper manures, especially and mostly.

Fourthly—Agricultural instruction, so as to enable the farmer to improve his farm without exhausting the land.

Fifthly—Enlightened agriculture elevates man socially and morally.

Sixthly—Full protection by the government to all struggling communities, so that farming societies may extend over the land, and the farmer and mechanic may have an equal chance and intelligent tilling of their fields in the places in the country.

The Governor laid all the points about crops to the ignorance of farmers, and their reluctance to adopt modern improvements in agriculture.

The Governor urged education as the surest basis of sound government, and told the farmers to be careful of the government of small districts, any body will do for Congress. The Governor, closed with a brilliant peroration, urging obedience to the law, and attachment to the whole country.

The fair was then closed by the announcement of the preliminary. The gross receipts are about eleven thousand dollars.
